A Life in Poems by William C. Wright

"Simple passion, remarkable clarity, precise insights mark this record of picket lines, devoted love, tough choices, steadfast activism, deep pleasures and powerful truths. This is a record to be wholly admired: one decade after another of reliable observation and intensely felt emotion. Wright has always woven experience into wisdom." —David Shevin

Another Life: Collected Poems By Allen Frost

"I wish you could have seen me reading these poems of Another Life for the first time . . . A slight smile I didn't even know was there surprised me. Ridiculously, I began making check marks in the margins of individual pages, as if I might never see them again. Now it's difficult to find a single page I did not leave my mark on, and the other way around." —Tom Kryss

- Steven DaGama

Faces & Voices Tales by Larry Smith

"What these monologues, letters and phone calls share is an urgency; with only the bare truth to guide them, Smith's characters struggle to make some sense in the world, through telling their stories, they succeed." —Bonnie Jo Campbell

978-1-933964-04-1 136 pgs. $14.00

Heart Murmurs: Poems By John Vanek

"With humor, sympathy, and an eye for what makes us most human, John Vanek offers us a far-ranging view of life that feels hard-earned and complete." —Elton Glaser

The Mermaid Translations By Allen Frost

Allen Frost's latest book, a fantasy novel of our times.

One of those wonder books of old like William Blake and Kenneth Patchen wrote--a magic fable, a novel in poetry.

Church of the Backyard Fire Poems by Vladimir Swirytsky

"Vladimir Swirytsky skillfully captures in 104 pages the spirit of what Ferlinghetti called the moment when the people of the world 'attained the title of suffering humanity.'"

Church of the Backyard Fire is a book of modern day wisdom, a compendium of psalms for a secular world sorely in need of the sacred."

Winter Apples
Poems
By Paul S. Piper

"So this is what Paul Piper has been up to, walking the dog, spying from trees, meeting mountains, testing the water, writing it down for us to see. Now you can know. You've picked up a book like a stone from a river. You're lucky you found this beauty, turn it round, open the seams and read." —Allen Frost

256 Zones of Gray
Poems
By Rob Smith

"Inspired by nature in his thoughtful and plain-spoken poems, Rob Smith reminisces and reflects on life, death, and the passage of time in 256 Zones of Gray. He takes us 'Along the Shore,' and we see barren trees through his eyes when the sky threaded/a blue ribbon between the trunks and a postcard moment in "Pittsburgh" when colors sliding back into the rivers/define the Point. Smith's words often give us hope, a lighted window on the edge of color." —Laura Bentley

120 Charles Street:
The Village
Journals & Writings
By Holly Beye

"Because this is a journal, written day-by-day, it has an immediacy, a sense of being there, of sharing in the daily struggle to make ends meet while being part of the flow of kindness, fun, courage, rebellion and intense creativity that marked that time and place....We are fortunate these lively, perceptive journals survived, along with their writer."

Second Story Woman
A Memoir of Second Chances
By Carole Calladine

"Carole Calladine is a quintessential storyteller whose writing is entertaining, informative, and inspiring. Second Story Woman is a feast for the soul, a guide to mindfulness, and a tale of tender triumph over a huge life challenge."

— Jan Phillips

Dogs and Other Poems
By Paul S. Piper

"In Paul Piper's newest collection of poems, Dog, like a bodhisattva, leads the narrator and reader to a place that glistens with wonder and humor."

—Charles Luck-

"Powerful poetry here by Paul Piper, mystical and whimsical. These dog poems are fun yet meaty, definitely intellectual bones to gnaw on."

—Tim Pilgrim

A Poetic Journey:
Poems
By Robert A. Reynolds

"With an artist's eye and a poet's ear, Robert Reynolds invites the reader into a world of loving and living. His verse harkens to a time when form embraced the images and reflections of the mind. His illustrations provide both sight and insight. Together, they strike a sure path toward wisdom." -
